The game plays out in primarily a turn-based manner, each turn marked when a new door on the level is opened.

Furthermore, rooms will have Dust, which powers the crystal As the crystal gains more power, the player can 'activate' a limited number of continuous sets of rooms, allowing them to build resource generators and turrets on rooms which have been activated.. Otherwise, the characters will act autonomously such as fending off any enemies that enter the room to the best of their ability.. The monsters will attack both the party and the crystal; killing the creatures has a chance of creating more Dust to run the crystal.. On the first level of the game, the characters will start in the crashed escape pod with the power crystal, while on subsequent levels, they will start on the elevator that they took from the previous level.. If the crystal is attacked, it will permanently lose Dust, and if this drops to zero, the crystal is destroyed and the game is over.

The player is able to control each character separately or in tandem by directing them to move to the various rooms on the current level or open doors on that level, as well as to initiate any special ability or to heal them.. Adds 200 G2G to the value of
